MIDIOR Adds Omgeo to Client Roster

Cambridge, MA - - September 5, 2006 - - MIDIOR, a management consulting firm based in Cambridge, MA, is pleased to announce the addition of a new client, Omgeo. Omgeo is a market leader in the development and deployment of post-trade, pre-settlement financial services solutions and has its primary North American operations in Boston and New York. Omgeo has engaged MIDIOR to help build and support a world-class product development and management function with the right mix of skills to create and deliver to market new products that meet their clients' needs in a rapidly changing industry. According to Steve Matthews, Managing Director at Omgeo, "MIDIOR came to us highly recommended as a management consulting firm with domain expertise in both product development/management and financial services. This unique mix of skills will be a great asset to Omgeo in building the right organizational structure to support innovation and effectiveness in new product development."

MIDIOR is a management consulting firm that specializes in product development and management for companies that deliver complex, technical products and services. With a professional staff composed of engineers with entrepreneurial experience, MIDIOR provides services ranging from organization model development, to product and technology roadmaps, to hands-on, tactical support for product initiatives. MIDIOR serves firms in the financial services, industrial products and high technology sectors with current clients that include market leaders such as State Street Corporation, Iron Mountain and Gerber Scientific.
